About the Zurich Lecture Series

The Zurich Lecture Series in Analytical Psychology was established in 2009 by the International School of Analytical Psychology Zurich (ISAPZURICH) and Spring Journal Books to present annually new work by a distinguished scholar who has previously offered innovative contributions to the field of Analytical Psychology by either:

- bringing analytical psychology into meaningful dialogue with other scientific, artistic, and academic disciplines;
- showing how analytical psychology can lead to a better understanding of contemporary global concerns relating to the environment, politics, religion; or
- expanding the concepts of analytical psychology as they are applied clinically

Each year, the selected lecturer delivers 4 lectures over a 2-day period in Zurich based on a previously unpublished book-length work. This book is then published by Spring Journal Books in a book series of which Nancy Cater, Ph.D., and Murray Stein, Ph.D., are the series editors.

About the 2014 Zurich Lectures

Act and Image: The Emergence of Symbolic Imagination by Warren Colman

Symbolic communication is basic to humankind, but where do symbols come from and how did humans develop the capacity to use them? Perhaps some clues can be found in the early flowering of symbolic imagination found in European cave paintings and sculptures from as long as 40,000 years ago and, even further back, in the use of stone tools by our hominid ancestors of 2.5 million years ago.

Looking at the human engagement with material objects in a context of social living leads to a shift of perspective in which symbols are not merely the expression of pre-existing psychic 'ideas' — rather, the social use of material objects plays an active role in the constitution of symbolic mind.

This interweaving of acting and imagining will also be considered in relation to infant development, analytic practice and the significance of 'action' in Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Warren Colman: The 2014 Zurich Lecturer

Warren Colman trained as a Jungian analyst in London at the Society of Analytical Psychology and qualified in 1992. His first degree was in English and Sociology and after training in social work and counselling, he worked as a couples psychotherapist at what is now the Tavistock Centre for Couple Relations between 1982-1997. Since then he has been in private practice in St. Albans. He lectures and supervises internationally and was a supervisor for the IAAP training of Jungian analysts in St. Petersburg and Moscow.

Warren Colman has published around 40 papers on a variety of topics. Many of his early papers explored the relevance of Jungian ideas to couple relationships, gender and sexuality. He then wrote several papers on the self before beginning to think and write about symbolic imagination over a decade ago. He has also published several papers on the therapeutic process, most recently 'Reflections on Knowledge and Experience' and 'Bringing it all back home: how I became a relational analyst'. Many of his papers have been published in the Journal of Analytical Psychology of which he was Editor-in-Chief from 2007-2012.
