

The Stories We Are: The Value of Abuse and Wrongdoings in Our Past Allan Guggenbühl, Dr. phil.

In this lecture series, Allan Guggenbühl will talk about the stories we create from our personal life experiences, and how our basic identity can be built on often dramatic, tragic, and heroic dramas. He develops the view that these stories empower us to cope with challenges and confront the future, but they can also hinder our development and become the source of our worries and fears. He highlights the literary and archetypal motifs in such stories, and the role of imagination and Mythodrama as ways to process and integrate the stories that we are.

Allan Guggenbühl is a graduate of the C.G. Jung Institute Zürich, the founder of the Institute for Conflict Management and Mythodrama (IKM), a professor at the University of Education Zürich, a faculty member of ISAPZÜRICH, and an analyst in private practice. He is well known for his crisis intervention management in schools and other institutions. His lectures at home and abroad focus on this subject, and on conflict prevention, teambuilding, adolescent development, and the topic of boys in school and men in professional practice. He has authored many books on these subjects.
