When Chinese Medicine Encounters Jungian Psychology

Tues, Sept 10

10:00–11:45

Christa Robinson, MA (with Jun Xu)

The Roots of Chinese Traditional Medicine in the I Ching
The Universal Compass of the (Eranos) I Ching presents the mandala that is the basis of the Chinese culture. Its eight main trigrams with their manifold associations change in three specific ways or cycles that allow precise observations in psychosomatic illnesses, dreams and attitudes, etc. The I Ching and Chinese medicine can complement one another for the benefit of patients.

Free Time for Lunch

13:00–14:45

Jun Xu

Presentation of a Seven-Year Case

The report of a seven-year case using acupuncture and traditional medicine that became blocked until the introduction of Jungian concepts. This case shows a way to work through the shadow realm of the unconscious.

15:00–16:45

Jun Xu

Comparison of the Chinese and Jungian Approaches

Both approaches will be looked at from the attitude of the practitioner with regard to their role in the healing process. Several examples will be given.

Free Time for Dinner

18:00–19:45

Christa Robinson, MA (with Jun Xu)

How To Use the I Ching in Our Clinical Practice

Differences between the Eranos and Wilhelm versions of the I Ching will be used to show how these can be used in our clinical practice, ending with a general discussion.
